REDDY IS A CHOSEN CHILD.

As I was dressing this afternoon Donna called me up and said laughingly, "Say Margie, what do you mean by turning my children's party into a searching expedition?"

"I am swfuly sorry, my dear," I answered, "but I just thought I would slip away, and my going would be unnoticed. After I got into my car I had an impulse to take a solitary ride and that is the whole story."

"That is just what I told all of them." asserted Donna, "for it seemed to me that I might do the same thing under the same circumstances. You see I understand how hard is this coming back from the gray world of grief to every-day life. My dear, you made yourself the most talked-of person at my party with your baby contume and your Cinderelia exit. Margie, why is it that the things you do are usually so unconsciously dramatic? I'll be over this afternon to tell you all about it."

"Wait. Donna," I said hurriedly, "Wait. Donna," I said hurriedly, "Continued anxiously?"

FRANCE'S HERO

Gen. Gouraud is the man who stopped the Germans between Rheims and Massiges last week. Withdrawins his troops when the German attack commenced, he waited for them to get past his old front line and then let loose a terrific fire which ended the drive. Gouraud led the French army at the Dardanelles in 1915. Like Gen. Pau, he has but one arm, but this only makes him dearer to French hearts.

we love to be with, the people of whose society we never tire, the people who never get on our nerves, the real reason why a man's wife and his female relations usually get along together about as harmoniously as a bunch of Kilkenny Cats.

And the queer part of this is that a man's ideals of what a woman should be are invariably founded on it he women in the shadow of whose petiticats he was brought up, and no matter how much he may be fastick that the women of his own a family put into his hand in his child-hood. Mother's pies and mother's precepts remain his standards as long as he lives, and all other pies and precepts are good or bad, according to their agreement with the ones on which he cut his teeth.

This being the case, it would seem that when a man went acourting he would choose for a wife a girl whose women and their appointed place in creation, it is a mary of the mother and the words as nearly a dead ringer for liss sisters as he could find, and that, in particular, he would select one who had been reared in the same orthorder.
